GLOBAL GOALS BOOK CLUB

On the bus ride to the last stop on Market Street CJ and his grandma saw lots of different people. All these people were using the infrastructure of the city. Infrastructure is a word used to describe built elements that support modern human life. Think about transportation, schools and even places for the community to meet. If we want to start creating sustainable cities and communities we have to start thinking about what infrastructure we need to change to serve our community, like the people CJ met on his bus ride.

If you could change one thing about where you live that would help your whole community what would it be? How do you think you could make this change happen?